STALINGRAD DEFENDERS ARE OUTNUMBERED THREE TO ONE; CITY LIKELY TO FALL SOON

400,000 Nazi Men With 1,000
Planes Make Terrific Assault

GERMANS LOSE HEAVILY

Situation Especially Grave
Southwest of Stalin-

By International News Service
MOSCOW, Sept. 4.—Outnumbered two and perhaps three to one by a Nazi army of 400,000 men supported by at least 1,000 battle planes, the defenders of Stalingrad were forced back steadily on the two-pronged battlefield today and fall of the great industrial city on the Volga appeared an imminent possibility.

Moscow newspapers reported recently that a "people's army" of volunteers from factories, offices and farms might be able at the eleventh hour to halt the German onrush.

But there was no fresh news of this organization and the communiques of the Soviet High Command dealt only with actual military developments.

Almost all of them were unfavorable and it seemed that little less than a miracle could prevent the populous city named after the premier and leader of the Soviet Union from collapse.

The bloody fighting along the Volga raged without a second's respite as great masses of German troops and mechanized units clashed incessantly at the defenders under cover of countless dive-bombers.

Arrival of seasoned Nazi fliers from the Egyptian battlefield and land troops from encampments in France bore testimony to the importance attached by Adolf Hitler to Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock's drive and to the heavy casualties already inflicted by the Soviets upon the enemy.

But anxious Moscovites sought in vain for any evidence that the tide of battle has turned.

The situation was especially grave southwest of Stalingrad, where German forces attacked Soviet infantry troops defending the direct approaches to the city.

FOUR INDUSTRIAL FIRMS HERE RECEIVE "MINUTE-MAN" FLAGS FOR WAR SAVINGS BONDS PURCHASES

Manhattan Soap, Pacific Steel Boiler, Railway Specialties, and Samuel Jackson's Sons Employees All Join in Patriotic Ceremonies—"Cal" Tinney Featured as Speaker at All Four Programs.

Four star-studded, blue "Minute-Man" flags were unfurled against a bright sun and blue sky here yesterday, when several hundred employees and their four employing firms were honored for participation in the pay-roll deduction plan for purchase of United States War Stamps and Bonds.

"Cal" Tinney, home-spun philosopher and radio commentator, was the outstanding speaker on the programs arranged, with Harold VanKirk, chairman of Bucks County War Savings Staff, serving as general chairman. Introduced at the various plants also were the following: Gene Reiley, deputy chairman of the state, and representing the U. S. Treasury directly; Benjamin Park, Walter Bright, C. V. Wilson-Lavery, and Edward Bloesinger, members of the Bucks County Industrial Committee under the War Savings Staff. Mrs. Tinney, who accompanied her husband here, was seated with him at the ceremonies.

The firms thus honored and who now have "Minute-Man" flags floating beneath the American flags on the staffs at their plants are:

Manhattan Soap Co., Pacific Steel Boiler Company, Railway Specialties Corporation, and Samuel Jackson's Sons.

At the ceremony held on the grounds of Manhattan Soap Company at 11.30 a. m., I. Katz, general manager and vice-president of the firm, was the first speaker. He expressed the pride and happiness of the company he represents in the participation by employees in such plan for purchase of bonds. He paid tribute to officials of the firm who have aided in outline of the plan, and termed it a "remarkable job." To the employees he said: "You are not only loyal workers, but you are loyal American citizens," adding that "I know that the 48 boys from our plant who are now serving their country will be proud of you when they hear what you have done."

Mr. Katz then introduced Mr. VanKirk as chairman of the occasion, the latter recalling how workers throughout the county are bearing their share of the war effort. Mr. VanKirk introduced members of the Industrial committee, and called upon Mr. Reiley for remarks. Mr. Reiley expressed pleasure at seeing efforts bearing fruit, adding that "figures do not lie." He mentioned that 98.6 per cent of the Manhattan Company employees are participating in the pay-roll savings plan.

Russian Forces Engaged by Romanian Troops

Berlin.—(By official German wireless)—The German high command claimed today that Russian forces holding the Taman Peninsula are being engaged by German and Romanian troops which succeeded in crossing the Kerch Strait from the Crimea last Tuesday.

The high command asserted that the crossing was made despite stubborn enemy resistance and with the support of navy units and aircraft.

It was claimed that German troops yesterday reached the "western suburbs" of Stalingrad while the Russians were said to have lost three gun-boats, two monitors and six freight vessels to "troops standing north of Stalingrad on the Volga."

U. S. Planes Smash "Jap" Shipping

Chungking.—United States Army planes, ranging deep into enemy territory, have carried out a series of smashing raids against Japanese shipping, warehouses and railroads, a communique from air force headquarters revealed today.

American fighter planes on Wednesday morning attacked 25 heavy Japanese junks and sailboats on Poyang Lake, ten miles southwest of Jaochow. The craft were loaded with enemy troops and supplies and heavy casualties were inflicted on the Japanese. A number of boats were set afire.

Simultaneously, another flight of American fighters attacked Japanese steamers towing rice barges in the Hankow channel between Kiukiang and Hankow. Seven steamers were believed sunk and others damaged by the United States planes.

American Forces Will Soon Be Aided by Weather

San Francisco.—Weather conditions which thus far have favored Japanese occupation of the Aleutians will soon improve so that American forces can take the offensive, Father Bernard Hubbard, famed "glacier priest," declared today after returning from his 16th Alaskan Expedition.

"Our Army and Navy," the priest said, "are going to show the Japanese that their occupation of Kiska was more trouble than it was worth. For them, it is good only for taking care of that."

The Japanese invaders, however, have a distinct advantage in the Kiska area at the present time due to the weather, Father Hubbard explained.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

The Basic Trouble

Washington, Sept. 3. ACCEPTING, as we must, the fact that the war still stretches long and terrible ahead of us, one thing stands out clearly—its cost, in men, money, material and time, is measured by the competency of our war organization in Washington.

That is the indisputable yardstick. Affecting not only the lives of millions of American men but the outcome of the war itself, the condition of the war machine is of overwhelming importance. The right of the people to expect the utmost competency from it is as clear as their right to information as to where and how it falls short.

management is nearly as competent as it should be. Those in position to have a detached view know that its inefficiency is almost incredible; that the confusion is beyond description and that, compared to its size and effort, the results are shockingly small. War, of course, is waste and no one expects hundred per cent efficiency, either abroad or at home. But the blunt truth is that, allowing for the greater magnitude of the present war, the way in which we are managing this one does not compare well with the way we managed the last one—though, Heaven knows, no one contends that that was as well managed as it should have been.

—O—
WHY? WHY IS this war less well managed than the last one? Why is the proportionate waste greater and why are the results less satisfactory? Why are things, generally, in the kind of mess that was avoided last time? There are two obvious answers. One is that in this war we have failed to profit by the experience of the last one. We have

WHO MAKES THE MONEY

There is an old maxim that wars make the rich richer and the poor poorer. It is quoted by rabble-rousers and starchy-eyed pacifists to support their arguments that wars are forced upon the mass of people by powerful financial interests. Even today echoes of the demagogues charge that the United States was forced into the First World War to protect the credit of large American banking interests are heard.

Figures supplied by the United States Bureau of Internal Revenue, the Department of Commerce and the Department of Agriculture show who is making the money in this war.

Wages and salaries are now 72 per cent higher than they were in 1939, the country's gross farm income is 51 per cent more this year than it was in 1939, but the estimated net income of corporations this year will be 26 per cent less than it was in 1939. This estimate may be off a little due to uncertainty about some provisions of the new revenue bill.

The tendency is interesting in that it is about the same as during the First World War. There was some profiteering at that time, and some of it was beyond all defense. But much of it was at the expense of the Allied governments, especially Great Britain, and—as it turned out subsequently—at the expense of the United States government. But the gross of wages and farm income soared because at that time the war debt did not invite the prospect of disastrous inflation.

Today the figures show not only that the money is going to the people, but also that the people will have to be taxed more heavily and will have to buy more war bonds if they are to carry their share of the war financing program.

COSTLY ACCIDENTS

One of the by-products of the war production program is a developing safety campaign on the largest scale the nation has ever known. This is to combat a mounting toll of accidents incident to the companionship of machines and men not yet completely experienced in their operation.

At the rate so far this year it is anticipated that 52,000 American workers will be killed and 180,000 permanently injured unless the pace of accidents is slowed down. These figures, which anticipate more than 4,000,000 accidents of all kinds in the ranks of workers, do not include accidents to non-workers.

It seems to take time for a new worker to appreciate fully that a giant shear will clip off a hand, that flying metal will destroy an eye, or that a forbidden smoke may result in a deadly explosion.

The prevention campaign which is getting under way is designed to impress the use of safety devices and practices upon the minds of workers so completely that they will forego hazardous conduct as a matter of course. Accidents last year cost American industry the equivalent of 1,500,000 full time workers. The purpose is to reduce this astounding figure this year, if possible.

Wives continue to assume ever greater importance. Not only will they continue to rate a $400 exemption in the new and more drastic income tax bill, but it has been decided definitely that married men will be drafted last.

THE CAPITOL WHIRL

By International News Service
HARRISBURG—(INS)—The Pennsylvania Economy League, which estimated that the Legislature can slash taxes approximately $75,000,000 during the 1943-45 biennium, has stated that collections for the first year of the current biennium are running about $10,555,000 above the estimates of budget officials. . . . The total revenue expected to be collected during the present two-year period is $414,141,822 while actual collections during the first year ended June 1 were $217,636,714. . . . The League pointed out, however, that the tax cut would be possible only if current trends continued through the next biennium.

Taxes on corporate net incomes, domestic and foreign stocks, foreign insurance, malt beverages, cigarettes, liquor sales and institutional revenues were $19,556,000 above estimates for the first year of the biennium while losses on inheritance taxes, personal property levies and licenses, fees, fines and penalties were approximately $12,191,000 during the same period, the League estimated.

"There is a growing feeling in many quarters that it is not patriotic for the State either to employ men who can be used directly in the war effort or to spend money which would otherwise be used to finance the war," the League stated. . . . "The putting into practice of such sentiments might well lead to a budget reduction, especially when it is realized that general fund appropriations for the current biennium are $225,123,995—exclusive of relief—most $20,000,000 greater than the amount for the previous biennium."

C. A. French, Commissioner of Fisheries, has reported that the Commission's announcement concerning the closing of certain waters to fishermen during the national emergency proved to be a "bombshell." . . . French explained that the Commission had not ordered the waters closed but had merely recapitulated the names of dams and waterways banned to fishermen for the duration of the war. . . . "The story was intended to inform the public of the action taken by various water and power companies throughout the State in order to protect their property from saboteurs," said French. . . . He added that the list was compiled from information furnished by the Board's officers in the various districts.

Pilgrim in MANHATTAN by MARGARET BELL HOUSTON

SYNOPSIS

Chloe Cameron had come to the Samuels' Bureau of Entertainment in search of a job as entertainer. Instead, she became secretary at the Bureau under a Miss Jepson, hoping that some day she may have an opportunity to substitute for some artist and sing her own cowboy and Indian songs. One Saturday forenoon, Chloe, alone in the office, is revising her rejected book, "Songs of the Trail" when Rann Sturgis, handsome lawyer, comes in to arrange some special entertainment for a Society party. He rejects all the Bureau's offerings but says, when leaving that he may be able to use the "Jack Rabbit Girl" (her own number) later. It is Chloe's birthday, and, after work, she stops at a bakery for a cake. Her thoughts go back to last year's celebration in her little home town of Wahalla, Oklahoma. After her mother's death, there was no staying on in her old home. She might have married Nate Barlow, the town's backer, but Chloe was ambitious and wanted a career. Returning to her one-room apartment in Greenwich Village, Chloe notices that Hugh Richards—the dark, quiet, young man, who lived next door—has moved. Many a time, when she first came there and was lonely, she wished she were better acquainted with him and now he was gone.

CHAPTER FIVE

Chloe put on a Dutch apron and set the rice to boil.
Nice, she thought, humming to herself. Nice to have a room like this, a niche like this, with the glow of the fire in it, and the warm red lamplight. It hadn't cost much to furnish. The couch that looked like a nasturtium bed, with its cover of green monk's cloth and its red and orange pillows, was no more than a low, springy cot; and the comfortable chairs—products of basement auctions—were worn and faded under their cheerful slipcovers.

The old desk had come from an auction, too, and the small round leaf table, the chest of drawers and the gold-framed mirror, and the lamp which shed a bloom over everything, over the buffalo robe near the hearth and the bits of Indian pottery, over the books in the built-in bookshelves and the copper leaver bowl, and the brass candlesticks on either side and the banjo clock, and the moose antlers above the door.

A beautiful niche. A grand niche. She could draw its glowing walls around her and inure back at New York. New York would have nothing of her, but she would take all of New York, teeming and rich and wonderful. As long as it gave she would take. . . . Shows—little balcony seats, perched high above the magic and the dream. Lectures—free, so many of them. Libraries, in whose vast, impersonal quiet you could sit and read. . . .

Walks weren't so bad, either, now that you weren't so tired of walking. The odd places you came to, down in your own neighborhood or over on the East Side. Hidden little streets, each with its own jargon. Shops where you could buy Syrian pastries, or Pont l'Évêque cheese, or smoked goose legs from Hungary, or plum duff, or red-pepper jam. . . . The very pushcart hints of adventure.
Magic sidewalks of New York! And always there was the chance that just around the corner was a publisher, wanting her book. When her book was published, then would come her chance to sing its songs. It was because she was nobody that they didn't care to hear her sing. Once her book was published, she would be Somebody. Of course, she wasn't turning down any chance to read and sing beforehand. But that was how she had figured it out.

Meantime, New York, I'm one of your seven million citizens. I'm having fun, and you've given me a job.

I don't have to turn around and go back to Wahalla in defeat.

The chicken was frying and Chloe made the salad, crushing the ripe avocado in a wooden bowl, mixing it with the tomato and chopped celery. A dash of lemon, some little red peppers. A Mexican salad.

Funny how I like my life, thought Chloe. An open fire is all

"May I speak with Mr. Sturgis?" she inquired of the cool male voice that answered.

"Mr. Sturgis has just gone out," the voice replied.

"Then may I speak with Mrs. Sturgis?" asked Chloe.

The operator's voice seemed to take a moment to get its breath.

"These are bachelor apartments," it replied, as if that was something all the world knew.

"Oh," said Chloe. "How nice! I mean, I'm so sorry."

"I'll connect you with Mr. Sturgis apartment." The voice dismissed her.

"Ello!" It sounded like Chinese. Gus. Thin, sweet, smiling. "Miss Sturgis. His house."

"Mr. Sturgis is not in?"

"No, please. Miss Sturgis out. Be back soon."

"May I speak to Mr. Sturgis?" she inquired of the cool male voice.

I need, rain on the roof—and a book to read!

I must write that down, she decided.

And she wiped her hands on the Dutch apron and looked around for a pencil. There was none in sight, and she picked up her purse from the couch and foraged inside.

No pencil there, either, but she discovered the pen that belonged to Mr. Rann Sturgis.

I must telephone him, she thought. She found his card, and sitting down at the desk dialed the number he had written. She heard the operator ringing, but there was no answer. It was his office number, he had given her.

But this isn't business, considered Chloe, and looked for his name in the telephone book. It was not there. A private number, she surmised. No use to request it of information.

However, she found the Strathmore in the book and dialed again. It was away over in Beckman Place.

Chloe left her number, felt that it was being written down carefully, laboriously. "Tell him to call me when he comes in. It's about his pen."

"Yes, Missy. Please. Thank you." Well, now, thought Chloe, where was I?

"An open fire. . . ." She was writing with the pen:

An open fire is all I need, Rain on the roof, and a book to read.

The pen wrote easily. But she scratched out "Rain on the roof" and wrote "A cat on the hearth."

She didn't like that either, and the pen scratched it out. She rewrote the words:

An open fire is all I need, Rain on the roof, and a book to read.

And if on the mat Be a drowsing cat, That will be wealth indeed.

Sounds like an old maid, thought Chloe. So I'm bound in that direction.

General Martin Opens Campaign

boy back in Greene County, where I was born and worked on my father's farm, and I have enjoyed them all. Still more important, I have profited from them all.

During these years, I have, as you may know been more or less in public life. I have been Auditor General and State Treasurer of Pennsylvania and for three terms I served as Chairman of the Republican State Committee.

Coming here, and meeting and talking with you . . . hearing your sound commonsense views, circulating among you farmers under the trees here at Williams Grove . . . has been of very great help to me in the performance of my duties in connection with those jobs.

Now, today, as a climax to my more than forty years as a soldier and a public servant of my native Pennsylvania, I come before you as the Republican Party's candidate for the State's greatest and highest honor—the Governorship of this fine Commonwealth.

If my candidacy is successful, I am going to need the help of every one of you in the most difficult and critical four years that are ahead of all of us in Pennsylvania and in all America. I know I can count upon that help . . . because in the history of this nation, the farmers of our State have never let America down. They will not let her down now.

Because I had that early experience on my father's farm as a boy, and subsequently have come into close and intimate contact with thousands of farmer-friends throughout the State in every one of Pennsylvania's 67 counties, I believe I have some understanding of the farmer's problems. Not as deep or as thorough as your own, of course . . . but remember, it is upon the help of you real experts that I will lean heavily when I am Governor.

One thing I do know . . . and so does every one of you. That is that the farmer everywhere else—is going to play an increasingly vital part in the conduct and the winning of this war. You know, we can all be proud of the fact that our Pennsylvania today produces more than one-quarter—more than 25 per cent—of the vital war materials of the United Nations. Pennsylvania's farms contribute heavily to that vast total.

From Pennsylvania's broad fertile acres . . . from her 170,000 farms . . . come huge stores of foodstuffs to feed our fighting men. Pennsylvania's farms represent an investment of more than a billion dollars. It is our greatest single industry. Our state ranks 12th in the nation's farm states.

In the dark months to come, more and more will be asked of you. The difficulties under which you work and produce will be greater. Like all of us, new sacrifices will be asked of all of you. Pennsylvania knows you will make those sacrifices cheerfully and gladly, so that your sons and all Americans and allies on the far-flung fighting fronts may be sure that they can fight on full bellies, as fighting men must.

However, here is my idea. I believe that the farmers of America—and particularly, the farmers of this Commonwealth—have done a pretty good job in the past. When the farmer has not prospered, it hasn't usually been his fault. But when production was needed he was always on the job to give it. Now in the past few years, the farmer has been at the mercy of a clique of men who believed in what they called the "economy of scarcity." That was an experiment. Some of us approved it, some did not.

We need not now go into its merits—because today, in war time—the so-called "doctrine of scarcity" has no place anywhere.

We are going to need all we can get of everything—and a lot more besides—during the coming few years.

There must be no wheat shortage, artificial or otherwise, while our soldiers need bread. There must be no meat shortage, as there is at present.

We can't experiment with plowing crops under the soil, or slaughtering little pigs—and let our soldiers eat rice like the uniformed apes of Japan.

So I may say—and I believe every war-time farmer within the sound of my voice will agree—let's get to work and produce. Let's sow and reap and increase the productivity and fertility of our fields and build up our flocks. Surely, we'll have to work from dawn to dusk to do it—but it's the least we can do to help feed those boys of ours who are mopping up tyranny in the seven seas and all over the face of the earth.

I can't see why, right now, we need 90,000 persons on the payroll of the United States Department of Agriculture. An efficient department in Washington is a fine thing, to work and co-operate with our various State departments, and with organizations like the Grange. But it doesn't require anything like 90,000 departmental employees to do that.

I imagine you could use a lot of those 90,000 in your fields this Fall. That is, if any of them know a plow from a sickle.

The farmer has to look more than most of us forward to the post war reconstruction. There is going to be a terrific job ahead of feeding a war-torn world when peace comes to us again. This business of "economy of scarcity" has got to be tossed overboard for the duration and for a long while afterward.

So I say the greatest help that can be given to the farmer today is to let him alone and let him produce, and meanwhile to see that he gets the best possible prices for what he does produce. Of course, normal sanitary inspections do not come under the head of "interference"—that is, unless they are needlessly duplicated. And you know, to your grief, that sometimes they are. They won't be in the State of Pennsylvania when I am Governor. I'll promise you that.

There are two other matters over which the State has control that are vital to the farmer. One is the condition of the roads and highways, and the other is our public school system. In both of those I am deeply interested, concerning both of them I have definite ideas, views, and programs.

As to the roads, I know they are the very arteries of the farmer's existence. Along the roads must flow the farmer's produce to the markets. I realized that as Auditor General, when I suggested to Governor Pinchot—then my superior officer—that the best thing he could give to the people of Pennsylvania was a wide network of inexpensive yet always usable roads. He adopted my suggestion—and that is where you get those secondary highways you call "Pinchot roads" today. The plan for these roads was first announced right here at this annual fair 12 years ago.

I know Pennsylvania is going to face a great problem in the maintenance of the highway system. Priorities are going to make repair and upkeep difficult. I have a plan to solve that by using local material—shale, limestone and gravel—not affected by priorities, and local labor. At any and all cost, our roads and highways must be maintained. As Governor of Pennsylvania I pledge you that I shall maintain them.

The present-day school system is tied in closely to our expanded highway system. Next after the church our schools are the bulwark of our nation. When I was a boy, the State was dotted with little red frame schoolhouses, and we walked to them and walked back again in good weather and bad. I've trudged many a mile through snowdrifts in Greene County, to school and back when I was a boy, and I know a lot of you have done the same thing.

Today we depend more on motor transport. Maybe we are not going to find that so easy. However, our school systems must be kept at their present high level. We cannot sacrifice the education of our young children, because they are going to be growing up into the new America during the trying days and years of readjustment from the war which are ahead of us.

There is just one thing more I want to say to you. That is that the job of every American today is to win the war. Nothing else matters beside that. Until that is done there can be no progress anywhere. There can be no contentment, no happiness.

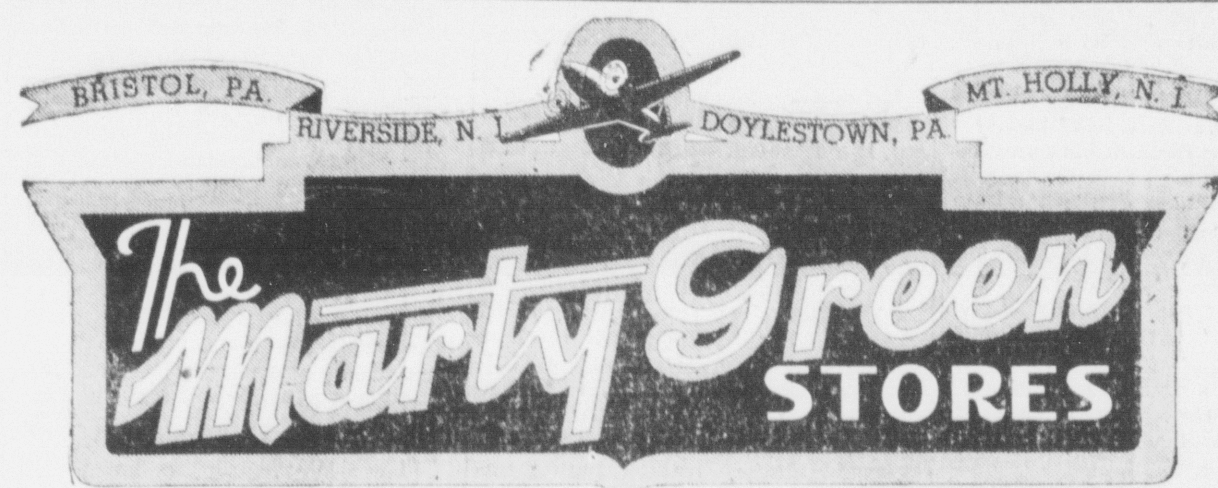

I do not have to tell you—your own sound commonsense tells you—that to win this war every one of us must work together. It doesn't matter who we are. The laborer must work with the employer. The white collar worker must work with the mechanic. The farmer must work with all of them—and all of them must work with the farmer.

That means that pressure groups—any kind of groups seeking special privileges for themselves—are out. When I am Governor, there will be no special favors. I am not on the auction block, trading promises for votes. If the people of Pennsylvania prefer as their Governor, someone who will promise all or any of them all or anything—then let them vote for some other candidate. I am not their man. But to every man in Pennsylvania who wants a square deal and nothing more; who wants what is rightfully coming to him and nothing more; who

EIGHT SONS REGISTERED

ROCHELLE, Ga.—(INS)—The J. F. Attaway family, of near Pitt, Ga., could go a pretty good sized share of winning this war on their own. The Attaways have eight sons registered for military service, ranging from 18 to 36 years of age.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—(INS)—Grace Moore sang at the AAF Technical Training Schools here recently to keep a promise to a private first class. Before entering the Army Pfc. Edward Douless was Miss Moore's personal representative. She told him she would sing at whatever station he was sent to. Miami Beach was the lucky post.

Four Industrial Firms Here Receive "Minute-Man" Flags

through purchase of war stamps and bonds. He urged that those not already purchasing to the amount of 10 per cent of their salaries do so. He mentioned that it was not necessary to appeal to those who have loved ones in the service. "They are helping and don't have to be told," he commented.

Mr. Reiley, in endeavoring to point out how the plan would aid in years to come, caring for individuals during any lean years, stated that those following the plan will help "No. 1—Yourself."

"Cal" Tinney, claiming he had notes "just like Mr. VanKirk had" had difficulty in locating them in his numerous pockets. "I got a speech wrote out," he remarked blithely as his hand ambled through his pockets, he commenting at the same time as he looked at the girl employees in their green uniforms, "I never saw so many 'Sweethearts' before." At that minute he drew out his "notes"—a cake of "Sweetheart" soap, the company's product, and thereafter referred to these "notes" which he had picked up on a tour of the plant.

"Mr. VanKirk forgot to tell you I'm from Oklahoma. Yes, sir—when I left there I got a good send off. They all told me they hoped I'd go far."

Then to the men who had secured a vantage point in windows on the second and third floors he called: "Can you fellows hear me up there on the roof? You know I was the champion hog caller of Iowa. I was never in Iowa, they just heard me calling from Oklahoma."

"Well, folks, I wasn't born in a log cabin, but my folks moved into one just as soon as we started living indoors."

Then referring to the manufacturing business of the firm whose plant he had just toured, Tinney remarked: "You know, I'm in the manufacturing business myself. I'm interested in boys. I've turned out three models so far. Our theory is that when you get a good model you stick to it." In an aside to his wife: "It is three, isn't it, honey?" then remarking to the crowd, "She's the Hedy Lamarr of our household."

Continuing about his boys, "Cal" said: "When my last boy was born I said to the other two boys, 'An angel with golden wings visited us last night and brought you a baby brother. Do you want to see him?' 'Naw,' replied the boys, 'We want to see the angel.'"

Taking thought of just why he was present, "Cal" stated he had come to off-set Gene Reiley's logic with facts, "and to help prevent Secretary Morgenthau from going crazy." "The financial hole this country's in can't go any deeper. You can just widen it out. Gene is worried, but it's just the Republican part of his nature."

Speaking of the "peace-time depression that always follows a war-time boom" Mr. Tinney remarked that "Bonds in the pocket will be a cushion to soften the fall when Old Man Depression pulls a chair out from under you."

"There's no use now asking questions about the why and wherefore. We were attacked. It was premeditated. Don't ask if it will take a week. It may take two weeks to get it over. But you keep on buying bonds."

Gordon Fromm, plant manager of Manhattan Company, accepted the "Minute-Man" flag presented by Mr. Tinney on behalf of the treasury department. To Mr. Tinney, Mr. Fromm said: "Thanks, 'Cal' for acting as representative of the U. S. treasury, and thanking us for what we have done. We are determined to do more and more, and to make our little bit a bigger bit." The flag was raised by William Lynch to a point below the American flag as the group sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

The first program of the day in which the same group participated was at 10:30 at the plant of Pacific Steel Boiler Company. Clifford Peterson, plant superintendent, introduced Mr. VanKirk, who presented the speaker Mr. Tinney, and also introduced industrial committee members. The flag at this plant was presented by Mr. Tinney to Mrs. Robert D. Brooks, who raised it on the staff, as Mrs. Russell A. Johnson led the group in singing of the national anthem.

J. N. Ehling, president of Railway Specialty Corporation, opened the ceremony at his plant. The flag was presented by Tinney to Charles Myers, assistant general manager, and was raised by Edward Liszewski, a foreman.

The oldest employee of Samuel Jackson's Sons received the flag at the ceremonies at that plant, she being Mrs. James Labor. John J. Lumsden, Jr., superintendent of the plant, introduced the speakers. The "Minute-Man" flag was raised by Charles Koch, an employee, as Mrs. Walter Rice led in singing of the national anthem. Employees at this plant are participating 100 per cent.

disregarded its lessons and repeated its blunders. Another is that we have not, as in the last war, enlisted the best available brains in the country, irrespective of party. Some of the most capable of our citizens, anxious to make their full contribution, are barred from the war effort because of White House personal or political distaste.

BUT, THERE IS another reason even more basic. It consists of the really absurd, not to say terrifying,...

overmanning of the war machine. The extent to which this has been done is unprecedented and indefensible. It is the real reason the organization functions so feebly. It is the real reason it bogs down in so many places. There are in Washington today many thousands of people connected with the Government who should not be here. There are fifty or sixty thousand men and women on the pay roll who not only have no useful work to do but who interfere with others who have. No corporation, business, factory, store or family, overstaffed as is this machine, could function at all. Conceivably, for example, of a newspaper with one publisher but forty managing editors, four hundred assistant managing editors, eleven hundred city editors, three thousand assistant city editors, a thousand foremen in the composing room, nine hundred night editors and two hundred thousand reporters. Conceivably of a hotel with one manager, eighty-seven assistant managers, three thousand desk clerks, four thousand telephone girls. These are not fantastic comparisons. Actually, they give a fairly accurate picture of the situation as it exists in Washington.

NOT LONG AGO, a wise and patriotic man, who has been here for a long time at considerable sacrifice, was informally conferring with a half a dozen Administration aides. Everybody agreed that things were in a pretty bad state. "Conceding," the man was asked, "that the mess is not only bad but dangerous, what would you do, if you had the power, to straighten things out?" "Well," was the thoughtful reply, "the first thing I would do would be to go through every department and agency and reduce personnel seventy per cent, not in the interests of economy but solely in the interests of efficiency." It is significant that after some hesitation everyone in the group agreed with him. The fact is that that remark went to the root of the trouble. No informed man possibly could disagree. Even if no more brains were taken in, if personnel was reduced seventy per cent, efficiency would be increased a hundred per cent.

THERE ARE HERE thousands of men busily undoing the work of other thousands. There are many more thousands whose work exactly duplicates that of as many more thousands — or conflicts with it. There are many more thousands with little or nothing to do who find themselves in contact with similar thousands who have just as little to do but have been here longer. This immense overmanning is the real menace to our safety. It is the real reason the full power and resources of the nation are not being made to count. It is the greatest threat to ultimate victory because it spells impotency.

BUT, WHAT IS to be done about

Faith Clarke's SHOPPING TIPS FOR BUDGETEERS

ZEPHYR MONEY BELT. Money belts have proved to be one of the most popular service gifts. A particularly desirable one has been designed and is being shown in Snellenburgs, in the Men's Furnishing Dept., 1st fl. Firmly fashioned of light weight silky twill, it has adjustable tape waistbands of just the right width and has a zipper for safety. Pockets for bills or important papers and change. It comes in light tan and olive drab, and can scarcely be felt when worn, only $1.25.

SCHOOL LAUNDRY is a problem. Clothes wear longer if sent home for washing and ironing. Besides, the weekly packages gives mothers a feeling that young people haven't quite deserted the nest. A grand, sturdy laundry case of Spalding's Vulcanized Fibre can be had in Snellenburgs, in the 1st fl. Luggage Dept. It gives four times the wear of some others. Metal corners. Three sizes, 20x11x4 1/2 ins., 21x21x7 ins., 22x12 1/2x8 ins., respectively priced at $2.95, $3.25, $3.50. Brown. Similar sizes in a good Swedish fibre, with vulcanized corners, brown, priced at $1.95, $2.25, and $2.50.

BLOUSES FOR SLACKS must be just the right sort or the whole ensemble looks dabby or plain cheap. The California-Made section of the Snellenburg Sports-Wear Dept. is showing a $2.25 group highly approved by fashionable females. The blouses are sufficiently man-tailored to look well with today's feminine trousers. Each is fashioned of good rayon crepe, and there are some very interesting shades for fall. Sizes 32 to 38. A nice Blouse Dept. generally. Look it over, 2d fl.

MIRACULOUS "CONTOUR" one of the important models among the famous "Smoothie" girdles and foundations, will be shown, by a special stylist, in Snellenburg's Corset Dept., 2nd fl., from Sept. 7th to 12th inclusive. Those of you who have figure problems, and yet want control with a softer type of garment, had better make a special trip to see this Miss Ryan and to ask her advice. The Snellenburg collection of Smoothies—and they actually include elastic and nylons—is priced from $5 to $18. See several and then select the one that seems just made for your particular figure. Let me know how you make out!

P. S. In the hurry to buy school clothes, don't forget to send the boys gifts weekly and letters daily! Faithfully, FAITH.

UNUSUAL DRESS SLIPS, unusual because of fine rayon material, "Seam-Proof" construction and classically plain lines. Well worth more than the $2 the Snellenburg Lingerie Dept. (2nd fl.) asks for them. I'd like to stock up on the full line of colors—black, navy, white, tearose, soldier blue and brown. Dressmakers often use these slips as sheer dress foundations. Sizes 32 to 44. Blacks and navys run to 44. They wear and wear. Examine them.

HELP A STUDENT by gifting him or her with just the right all-inclusive Shakespeare volume needed in classes. The particular "Complete Shakespeare" the Book Dept. of the Snellenburgs is featuring, is practically a giveaway at 79c. Personally, I think the department's "buyer" is secretly a philanthropist. Even at the regular price of $1 the volume is a hundred percent bargain. Why, it has all the Temple notes that the best instructors require! It is definitely a school volume, but one which any household would do well to have, too. 1st fl. Hurry.

OIL TO COAL. Patriotism demands that we save oil for the boys. You who have had coal furnaces converted into oil burning furnaces—and there are many of you—can rejoice. The "Stoket" has been made expressly to reconvert your particular furnace back to a better coal burning outfit than it was originally. But, remember, your furnace must first have burned coal! The Stoket has so many virtues that I want you to hear the Stoket expert tell about them at Snellenburgs, the only shop where I have been able to see this remarkable thing demonstrated. The "Stoket" operates equally well in any warm air furnace that never was a coal burner, conserving coal and money. Comes in different sizes, priced at $35, $45, and $55. Investigate now. Be prepared!

THE RIGHT SLACKS are as different from the wrong slack as is good taste from bad. Some, California made, are made to fit, and to slim rather than to broaden the figure. They come in an excellent corduroy of three jewel tones—royal, red, and kelly—or emerald, and in a good practical brown. Sizes 12 to 18. Have a try-on as soon as possible. Buys like these don't hang around long, even at $5.98. Snellenburg's 2nd fl. California-Made Sportswear Shop.

It? Reduction in personnel is the imperative need of the hour. Yet, who is to give the order? That can come from the White House only. And for ten years Mr. Roosevelt's tendency has been strongly toward expansion, never toward contraction. His practice has been never to drop anyone. When changes were forced, new men were put over the old men, but the old men still stayed on the pay roll. This has been carried to a perilous and appalling length. No finer thing could happen than for the President to realize all this and issue the "directives" that would contract this horribly swollen and utterly unmanageable organization into something that could be operated with ordinary human intelligence.

New Hope Street Fair Will Benefit Recreation Center

The New Hope Recreation Center's 1942 street fair will be opened officially tonight on the parking lot of the Bucks County Playhouse at New Hope by Groucho Marx, the mustached and loquacious member of the three Marx Brothers. Groucho will be the week-end guest of Moss Hart, who will also attend the opening of the three-day fair.

Chairman Charles Evans announced that the fair will consist of 20 exhibits, including a separate section for children. Never before in the history of the Delaware Valley community has such a sizeable affair been staged. The fair will continue for three days, through Monday, September 7th. On Labor Day it will open in the afternoon as well as the evening. Sunday it will be closed.

Most unusual exhibit on the fair grounds will be the Dance Players circus ballet, which is being performed twice hourly under canvas. Billed as "Gene Loring's Sideshow," the 18 members of the Dance Players will perform a montage comedy circus ballet conceived especially for the New Hope Fair by Eugene Loring.

NO INTENTION TO RUN WHIRLAWAY IN FALL HANDICAP

Next Engagement Will Be In
The Narragansett Special,
September 12th

NOT TO RUN IN N. Y.

Think They Should Be Reasonable On the Weight Question

By Jack Mahon
N. S. Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—(INS)—Any of you fellows with a race-track interested in having Whirlaway drop around and run for the customers?

If so, the line will form on the right and walk, please do not run, with your offers to Trainer Ben Jones, boss of the Calumet Stable and trainer of the long-tailed wonder.

This is to inform you that except for his next engagement in the mile and seventy yards, $25,000 added Narragansett Special Sept. 12, Mr. Longtail has no particular stakes on his schedule and definitely has no intention of competing in the Fall handicap races in New York.

Mr. Jones made this plain in no uncertain language last night before entraining for Providence, R. I., to get his money-winning champion in shape for his next test.

"I won't have anything to say about Whirlaway's Fall schedule until after the Special," said Ben, "but I don't intend to run him in New York. I can't as long as they continue to pile the weight on him as they have. There is no use in asking the horse to carry 134 pounds when some of the other good ones get in with only 100."

"He was beaten by Tola Rose with 103 pounds up in the Butler at the Empire City, when he carried 130. They still asked him to carry 134 in one of the opening handicaps at Saratoga and then gave the same weight again for the Aqueduct Handicap."

"I don't mind them putting weight on Whirlaway," continued Ben, "but I think they should be reasonable, otherwise it's unfair to my horse. They should raise the weights to make it a horse race, not just to beat Whirlaway."

Jones cleared up another point concerning Whirlaway's narrow escape in the Trenton handicap at Garden State Park. "I think he was pressed to win," admitted Ben, contradicting many of the fans and experts who thought Whirlaway finished very fresh.

"He made a bad turn at the head of the stretch," explained Jones, "and Jockey Eads was excited. No, the colt didn't win easily, he hadn't much left. But what many of you fellows don't realize is that the colt had a lot of trouble with his eye. He got something in it out in Chicago and it really bothered him quite a bit. I even had to break up his training for a couple of days. He'll be better though from now on."

Asked who would ride Whirlaway in the future, Jones indicated he would use Eddie Arcaro when available and said he had "a couple of other good boys in mind in case Eddie had contract obligations." George (the Iceman) Woolf is one of them but Ben wouldn't reveal the other's identity.

Ben made it plain that he regarded Eads as a "fine young race rider," but believed it best for the boy if someone else rode Whirlaway. "I think that one colt just has the best of him," he explained.

Youth League To Battle for Title

The playoff series of the Diamond Youth Baseball League will get under way Tuesday night when the Third Ward team meets Voltz-Texaco on St. Ann's field.

The managers of the three teams involved decided on this at a meeting held in the Diamond store last night. Franklin, the third club which finished in a deadlock for first place, drew a bye and will meet the winner of the above game on Thursday night.

All games will start promptly at 5:45 o'clock, and seven innings will constitute an official game.

Explosion Rocks Grand Central Area of New York

New York—An explosion which rocked the entire Grand Central area of New York brought serious injury to at least two women today, made shambles of several apartments in a 300 family apartment house and shattered and cracked windows for blocks around.

The explosion, tentatively laid to a gas leak, brought down a separating wall between two apartments on the sixth floor of the 300 family building and fire officials had not immediately determine in which of the two apartments it occurred.

William Marr, resident manager, was cut about the head by flying glass. The giant apartment building extending from a block along Third Avenue from 47th to 48th Street with its entrances on the side streets, and a row of stores along the avenue frontage, actually rocked so violently that the first floor store owners were thrown off balance.

WAY TO AID U. S.

NEW YORK.—(INS)—The war in the Pacific shot holes in U. S. imports of essential fats and oils, the War Production Board points out. Over half of them come from the Philippines, the Dutch East Indies and Malaya, now in the hands of the Japs. It's to help make up this loss that the country's kitchens are being enlisted in the drive to save fats which Americans used to waste.

CAMP BLANDING, Fla.—(INS)—Soldiers generally are honest.

When Pvt. Irving Buxbaum, of New York City, climbed into a cab at nearby Starke a pay-day week-end recently, he found a roll of $65 in the front seat.

Suspecting the loser was probably a doughboy, Buxbaum left word with the taxi company where he could be found. About an hour later a breathless private rushed up to Buxbaum and proved himself the owner of the roll. He was deeply grateful for the return of his money.

the British minefields on the southern end of the El Alamein line have been completely wiped out and the enemy has suffered considerable loss of equipment, said reports from the battle area.

But reinforcements were reported moving up from the Axis rear, and Nazi field marshal Erwin Rommel was expected to resume his offensive shortly.

lan defense, supplemented the remarks made by Dr. Wagner. The other speakers included William J. Begley, Esq., member of the Bristol Defense Council; Dr. H. Doyle Webb, member of the medical branch of the Council and John S. Roberts, Jr., Borough Engineer, in charge of constructing the Bristol decontamination center.

Dr. Wagner told the Rotarians of the present set-up of civilian defense in Bristol. He described the duties of the defense council and said that now the civilian defense in this locality is in the hands of the United States Army.

It was outlined by the speaker the various duties of the air raid wardens, emergency police, fire departments, medical men, ambulance corps, decontamination staffs, demolition squads and the others engaged in the effort. How the evacuees and refugees are to be cared for was also outlined.

The Bristol Control Center will supervise the defense activities in about one-third of lower Bucks County with Franklin Wallin as commander and Paul J. Barrett, adjutant.

Dr. Wagner said that in his opinion blackout tests were good for the community as they showed up the weaknesses in the system.

Mr. Begley spoke of the Bristol Defense Council and the part it plays in the defense organization.

Dr. Webb explained to the Rotarians of his visit to Philadelphia to learn the proper construction for a decontamination center and of having viewed the models for such a structure.

Mr. Roberts spoke of the construction of the decontamination building by volunteer mechanics who were giving of their services absolutely free to the Bristol municipal government.

It was explained why the decontamination building was located where it is being built. It was stated that light, heat and hot water along with the services of a janitor will be provided by the borough.

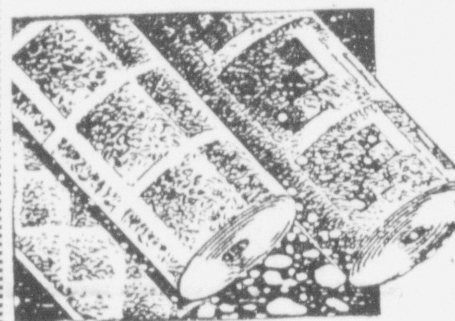

The meeting then developed into an open discussion of the method for handling casualty cases as the result of gas attacks.
